

Wednesday Night's Protest Allowed Back On Streets

June 25, 2020

KUER

<https://www.kuer.org/post/am-news-brief-fatal-rabbit-disease-carbon-farming-protesters-return-streets#stream/0>

After being relegated to the sidewalks by police the night before, protesters took to the streets again Wednesday night with calls for justice for Bernardo Palacios-Carbajal, the 22-year-old was shot and killed by Salt Lake City police about a month ago. A spokesperson with the police department said protesters had not communicated where they would be Tuesday, making the traffic situation unsafe. Police did allow demonstrators back on the streets on Wednesday, and protesters blocked traffic throughout downtown Salt Lake City. The ACLU of Utah said public streets and sidewalks are considered public forums, and people can demonstrate there as long as it's reasonable. — Emily Means